All Stars Come to Fenway Park

on July 9

After a lapse of a year, due to war conditions, the annual All Star game will be resumed this year with Fenway Park the scene of the classic and President Thomas A. Yawkey of the Red Sox the host. July 9 is the date set for the game, the outstanding baseball event of the year other than the World Series, and President Yawkey is making plans to make this year's program one of the most attractive in the history of All Star competition.

This year's game will be the 13th since the first game was played at Comiskey Park in 1933, when the American Leaguers, with Lefty Gomez of the Yanks, Alvin Crowder of the Washington Senators and Lefty Grove, then of the Athletics, defeated the National Leaguers, 4-2. The junior leaguers have won eight of the 12 previous all star games.

Manager Mel Ott of the New York Giants holds the record of having played in the most All Star games—11. Our Manager Joe Cronin, one of the greatest shortstops of modern baseball, is tied with Bill Dickey and Joe Di Maggio of the Yanks and Jimmy Foxx, former Sox idol, for the American League's most-time player, with seven. Di Maggio, back in the Yankee lineup this year, should break the tie singlehandedly for Manager Cronin and Dickey probably will not see active service in the 1946 classic while Foxx has retired from baseball.

If a quick look at the records means anything—and it probably doesn't—the American Leaguers should win this year for they haven't been beaten as yet in the long series when the game was played in an American League field.

The years, locations and scores of all previous All Star Games follow:

1933	At Chicago	Americans 4, Nationals 2
1934	At Polo Grounds	Americans 9, Nationals 7
1935	At Cleveland	Americans 4, Nationals 1
1936	At Braves Field	Nationals 4, Americans 3
1937	At Washington	Americans 8, Nationals 3
1938	At Cincinnati	Nationals 4, Americans 1
1939	At Yankee Stadium	Americans 3, Nationals 1
1940	At St. Louis	Nationals 4, Americans 0
1941	At Detroit	Americans 7, Nationals 5
1942	At Polo Grounds	Americans 3, Nationals 1
1943	At Philadelphia	Americans 5, Nationals 3
1944	At Pittsburgh	Nationals 7, Americans 1

In addition to the regular All Star game, the service All Stars played the stars of the American League at Cleveland, July 7, 1942. The Leaguers defeated the service men, 5-0.
